After 20 years, the Chandler Bikeway Extension Project is finally moving forward after a 4-1 approval by the Burbank City Council on Tuesday, Nov. 18, for design plans. The $3.3-million alignment initiative, due for completion at the end of 2028, will link some existing bikeways and ultimately offer a much safer lane to the downtown Metrolink station. The proposed plan involves a right-hand turn onto N. Victory Boulevard, then a left onto W. Cypress Avenue, with more than 50 parking spaces removed along the way and various adjustments to work within local rights-of-way and traffic intersections.

BTMO's Annual Sustainable Transportation Student Art Showcase is Back!

Image Source: BTMO

BTMO invites Burbank students to use their creativity to explore sustainable transportation and make their voices heard through art in our virtual showcase. Highlight how biking, walking, taking transit, or carpooling can positively impact our community and the environment to compete for one of three $25 gift cards!

Students can submit drawings, collages, digital art, comic strips, poetry, or other mediums that can be displayed in a virtual format. Bonus points if your piece features Burbank or local transportation agencies. You can get inspiration from last year's submissions here.

Submissions must be uploaded by Friday, February 13, 2026, in .docx, .jpeg, .png, or .pdf format (maximum 67 MB). Share your vision, inspire change, and show how art can spark conversation about building a more sustainable future!

Snapshots in Motion is Live on the BTMO Website!

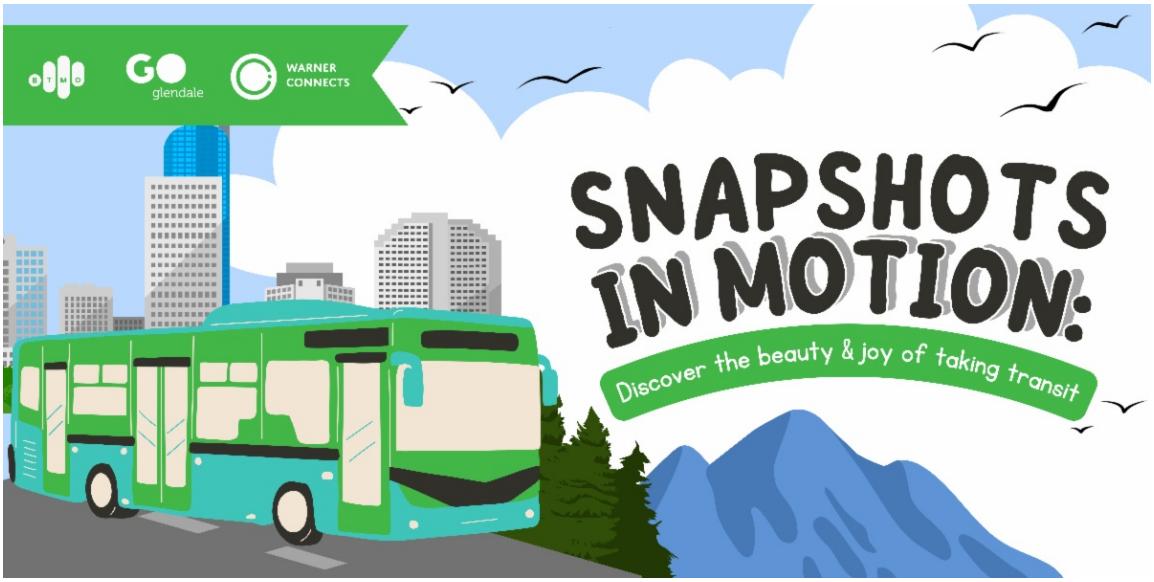

Image Source: BTMO

To highlight how accessible the region really is by transit, we partnered with Go Glendale and Warner Connects to create a map built entirely from submissions from our community. Each pin represents a business, destination, or hidden gem that people have personally explored using transit. From neighborhood cafés near bus routes to parks a few minutes' walk from a rail station, discover places that are not only worth visiting, but easy to reach without driving.

Choosing transit is a way to connect more deeply with the neighborhoods around us. By sharing favorite transit-accessible locations, our community members helped build a resource that encourages others to explore more and drive less.

LA Metro hails success of programs offering free rides, discounted passes

Source: David Crane, Los Angeles Daily News

More than 1 million people have signed up for programs that provide free rides and discounted passes to students, low-income and fire-impacted Angelenos since 2021. In total, these two programs — Low Income Fair Is Easy and GoPass — have provided more than 92 million free rides and 14 million rides on discounted passes, officials said. Metro CEO Stephanie Wiggins hailed the success of the programs, noting it was a “major focus” of the agency to grow them out over the last few years.

Could Cities Partner with Guerilla Urbanists for Safer Streets?

Source: Maylin Tu

Across L.A., neighbors are banding together to paint crosswalks to protest the city's failure to protect people outside of cars. People's Vision Zero paints crosswalks across the city to protest for safer streets. Painting guerilla crosswalks in L.A. is not new — the anonymous group Crosswalks Collective LA has been doing it since 2022.
